

Musing on the 2007 NZ Curriculum Statement

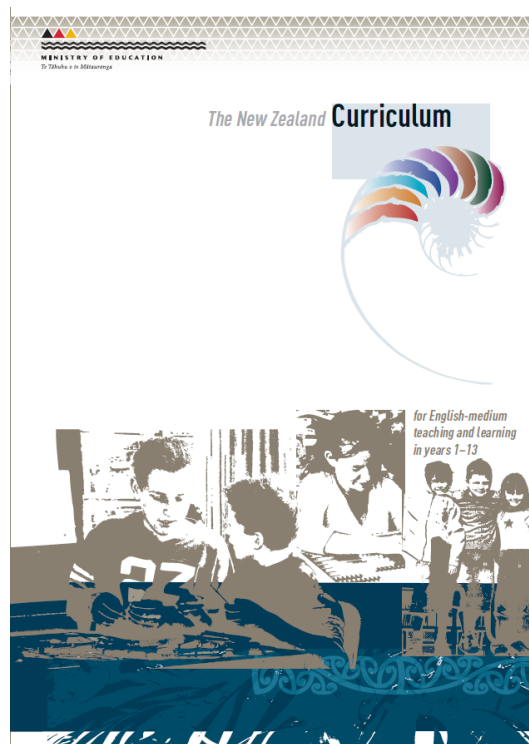

This month Richard has looked at the Hauora in Schools theme and has asked a few questions, or posed a few thoughts and included some links to further thinking about wellbeing in the school setting.

His main observation is that it is all available in the first 45 pages supported by Wellbeing for Success: A resource for schools (Education Review Office NZ; 2016).

A principal recently alerted Richard to 'The Helsinki Bus Station Theory' and he wonder with all the focus and attention given to 'National Standards' and data collection that we keep looking for the 'right' bus to be on – when it is already there waiting to be boarded!
